

PUNE AUTHORS' ASSOCIATION

Introduction :- Pune Authors' Association, a group of authors from Pune was formed in Jan 2025 by Cdr Shiv Mathur, a veteran of the Indian Navy and an author of four books. He realized that there is a need to work in a collaborative way to revive book reading, promote indie authors and sell books through some innovative ways. The group begin with a modest number of about 25 authors and it has been evolving constantly since its inception. Many authors joined and left and many have stayed put. The process will continue as the group evolves further and stabilises with a stronger presence and outcomes. As on 17 May 26, we have 53 authors in the group.

Goals : Following are the main goals of the group

- a) Collective efforts through collaboration.
- b) Participation and passion are a must for the authors in this group
- c) Promote indie authors
- d) Help authors with all publishing services at a minimal cost. We have authors who can format the manuscripts, edit, proof read, as well as design book covers.
- e) We have a few printers who print as low as 50 copies and at a very cost-effective rate.
- f) Organise literary events in housing societies and educational institutions as well as corporate offices.
- g) Donate book to key libraries like airport libraries as an avenue for promotion.
- h) Focus on organizing literary festivals in schools and colleges, where the actual book reading can be revived.
- i) Help authors to understand the exploitation by the publishers and how to escape that.

Achievements : Following has been achieved since Jan 25 till 17 May 26.

- a) Organised seven events in housing societies, colleges and corporate offices.
- b) Participated in three major book fairs organized by the National Book Trust of India in Pune, Goa and Dehradun.
- c) More events and book fairs are lined up till Jul 26.
- d) Donated and setup libraries at six major airports in India. Donated almost 1400 books for this initiative. Kolkata, Chennai, Pune, Thiruvananthapuram, Mangaluru, and Bhubaneshwar.
- e) Maintaining a catalogue of fiction and non-fiction books.
- f) All efforts are on cost sharing basis, so the whole initiative remains a low-cost affair and affordable to the authors who participate in literary events and book fairs. Participation in literary events remain free.

- g) Created a LinkedIn page that currently works as a landing page and also promotes the group amongst professionals.

Way Ahead :

- a) Build a web-site for automating the operations and create a system that will become independent of any manual intervention. The rules will be implemented and all activities, transactions, database, tracking, supply chain, all will get rolled up into the web-site. All sales will happen through the website.
- b) Marketing of the group through the website and LinkedIn page.
- c) Start a book shop, cum library cum café in Goa, that will be the authors book shop, café-library and it will be managed by the authors of this group.
- d) Engage more with schools and colleges to engage them in literary activities and revival of book reading. Thereby, freeing them from mobile phones, scrolling and social media.
- e) Form a foundation for promoting book reading and helping indie authors with publishing services.
- f) Welcome authors from across the globe to join this group and take it to great heights.

AUTHOR : SRISHTI JAIN

AUTHOR BIO

Srishti was born on the 9th of October 2000 to Manoj and Anita Jain. A second born in the family of Engineers and Economists, she created her own unique way of seeing the world through stories. She lived in Dombivili on the outskirts of Mumbai, Maharashtra and did her primary schooling there. Then she moved to Pune. She pursued science in her junior college but shifted to humanities to take English as her major. Though the plan changed once she stumbled across the subject of Psychology, fell in love with the human mind and behaviour, and decided to major in it instead. Her interest in reading and writing was so phenomenal that it so happened, that everyone's least favourite "writing skills" section in the English exam paper was her favourite. Sris graduated from the University of Pune with a Bachelors and Masters in Psychology and aims to be a Clinical Psychologist while she writes for the rest of her life.

“For don't we all have that one person we cannot say no to?”

The infamous drug cartel Qwan has raised its fangs again, this time operating from the city of Shimla. DSP Shrikant Pandit, of CBI Mumbai, is on route with a fresh recruit, Aniruddh Nigam, to aid the NCB where Sr Narcotics Inspector Ranjeet introduces them to the young city boy, Dhruv Saini, their chauffeur and guide. Shrikant begins in the most unusual way possible, by sightseeing and throwing a new year party. But he was failing, for there was a traitor in their circle of trust.

Will Shrikant be able to catch the traitor in time or will he end up taking a decision which he will have to regret nine years later?

They say a picture is worth a thousand words but I choose to differ. For me, it was many a random picture which gave birth to a storm of thoughts and these subsequently translated into a flow of words. 'A handful of dewdrops' is an attempt to look beyond the ordinary picture and trace the extraordinary emotional experience through a brevity of words.

Since it was often an unexpected visual encounter which sparked off many a poetic endeavour, the image precedes it in this collection. However, I would be digressing from the absolute truth if I claimed that every time I put pen to paper, it was inspired by a picture. For some poems, I discovered images which could complement them and others had to simply stand alone.

Wordsworth defined poetry as 'a spontaneous overflow of emotions.' Since emotions and their spontaneous overflow are experienced by all of humanity, I am convinced that in each one of us there is a poet and an author waiting to find expression. 'A Handful of Dewdrops' is an outreach from one such self-styled poet to others. I hope this collection will strike a chord of familiarity and establish a connect between me and those who chance upon it.

Riya Menghani has done in Masters in Computers and is a working professional in the IT Industry. Since childhood, she is passionate about reading, attracted to words, be it anywhere, in books, newspaper, medicine boxes, walls, packaging materials, wherever they are spotted. She has always been a reader, a thinker, a dreamer and interested in learning with new things. Her reading habits lead her to discover the hidden writer in her. This book is her first attempt as a writer. In her free time, she loves to cook different types of dishes for her family, she loves listening to informative videos and interviews of famous personalities. She is blessed with a loving husband and 2 teenager kids, leading a happy life.

This book is not a story; it's a string of experiences that the protagonists go through.

Abhishek, a college goer becomes a self-made business man, has to fight and defeat the enemies of Shagun, in order to free her from their shadows, empower her to drop her inhibitions, reunite her with her family and eventually marry her, as she is the love of his life.

Shagun, a young high schooler, has to go through a lot of sufferings in life, is forced to live a life of secrecy. She is helped by her soul mate Abhishek during her journey, in order to save herself from the bad guys and to lead a normal life without any fears.

Abhishek and Shagun had met during their young days and felt the first feeling of love. But got separated immediately after and lost contact with each other. Years passed as they kept waiting and searching for their first love. This story is about their journey and trials that they went through during "The Quest of Lost Love".

If a book doesn't make you think, it is of no use. This book talks about the life of a girl, who goes through many ups and downs. Her main support system is often not around, leaving her to take care of her own self, when she is in vulnerable situations. Although her partner heroically pulls her out of a major hell hole, still, many times she is left struggling for a good life without any inhibitions. She is restricted by factors governing the decisions of her life, in the name of being a good girl. This book touches upon a little on the said/unsaid rules laid for a girl in some middle-class households.

A hidden secret volcanic crater. Three magical lakes. One move could alter their lives forever. The Secret Magic Lakes in Kelimutu draws the readers into a realm where nature, mystery, spirituality and destiny converge in breathtaking harmony. Set against the awe-inspiring backdrop of Flores Island, this story traces the extraordinary journey of three inseparable friends— Ranpalee, Rajin, and Manil; whose lives take an unexpected turn when a strange calling from the tri-coloured crater lakes of Kelimutu begins to echo their curiosity. Known for their shifting hues and mystical legends, these lakes have fascinated explorers for centuries, but never before has a trio dared to pursue their secrets with such courage and purpose.

Driven by curiosity and bound by an unshakeable bond, the three best friends embark on a quest that is far greater than a simple adventure. Each step they take across Flores' rugged cliffs and deep lake bottoms draws them deeper into a world where spiritual forces and ancient energies breathe beneath the earth's surface. But what truly awaits them at the heart of Kelimutu? Are they merely travellers, or chosen guardians of a destiny written long before their time?

As they journey forward, questions linger in the air like whispers carried by the mountain winds: Will they succeed in their mission? Can they unlock the mysteries concealed within the ever-changing lakes? And more importantly, are they prepared for the truths that may reshape their understanding of reality itself?

Their path is illuminated by friendship, challenged by unseen forces, and guided by the belief that every mystery holds a purpose. What lies beyond the veil of the ordinary is not just an adventure—it is a calling.

After all, Kelimutu is not just a place of beauty and legend. It is a mystery magic portal, waiting to be unveiled.

Jasbir Basu is an award-winning Indian author and Chartered Accountant whose stories celebrate empathy, resilience and the quiet strength of the human heart. Guided by her mission to prove that compassion and kindness are the true forces that sustain humanity, she writes emotional short stories and poems that touch deeply and heal gently.

Before turning to writing full-time, Jasbir worked in the credit sector for over a decade, blending analytical discipline with creative sensitivity. Her debut book, Not Without My Mother, won the India Authors Academy Award and established her as a powerful new voice in contemporary Indian literature.

Her writing often explores emotional endurance, family relationships and spiritual awakening, reflecting her lifelong fascination with human nature and the unseen layers of existence. An ardent lover of cinema, spirituality and family-oriented stories, Jasbir draws inspiration from authors such as Ayn Rand, Agatha Christie and Khaled Hosseini — visionaries known for their powerful storytelling and timeless emotional depth. Like them, she seeks to create literature that lingers in the reader's heart long after the last page is turned.

Jasbir believes that stories are more than words — they are bridges between souls. Through her books, she hopes to build those bridges across generations and geographies, reminding readers everywhere that in a changing world, the heart remains the strongest compass.

“The dead don’t always rest in peace... especially when love, guilt or secrets hold them back.” They appear in the quiet hours of the night — in mirrors, in dreams, in the places they once called home. Spirits torn from life too soon, bound by a final desire they cannot fulfil alone. Now, they’ve returned... to ask one last favour from those they left behind. In this gripping collection of paranormal short stories, each tale unravels a ghost’s final journey — a soldier begging for closure, a tormented child revealing the darkest truth, a father connecting with his dearest daughter to fulfil his dream. Every story is a chilling reminder that love can defy death — but so can regret. Thrilling, atmospheric and deeply human, THE LAST WISH explores the fragile line between this world and the next — and what happens when that line is crossed. Would you grant a final wish... even if it meant facing the dead?

Amita's writing journey commenced with her blog – Candid Thoughts where she offers a medley of experiences, opinions, fiction, and poetry. Her fascination for the magical worlds sparked her interest in children's fiction. So, armed with some crazy imagination and a fondness for all creatures with four legs, wings, or tails, Amita began spinning some magic of her own. She freelanced for a children's newspaper and her stories and poems have also been published on websites and in anthologies. Amita holds a Masters in Economics and has worked with research organizations before venturing into her true calling. Apart from writing, she loves sketching, painting, and crafts.

The book features five stories, each framed with a unique narrative, set in imaginative surroundings, and sprinkled with engaging dialogue. It is ideal for 8 to 12-year-olds but is enjoyable for teenagers as well. The stories are mostly fun reads, but values such as positivity, compassion, and self-love are organically woven in. By igniting imagination and fuelling curiosity, the book is a perfect escape from screens. It is a great gift to foster a love of reading among young ones.

Award: The book has won the Authoropod Magazine's 2025 Award for Best Children's Literature.

Reyanshi Chouhan is a student of class 9th. She is the youngest author in our group and has penned a wonderful fiction novel, that will leave you spell bound by her imagination and writing skills and command over the language as well.

The city choked, a pressure cooker ready to blow. Power cuts, like mischievous poltergeists, plunged neighbourhoods into sudden darkness, succumbing to the frantic hum of generators and the distant wail of sirens. People, now huddled inside, candlelight casting spooky, dancing shadows on their walls. Fear, thick as Hecate's mist, seeped into every crack, making the air heavy and hard to breathe. Urgent news flashes blared from screens, their harsh light reflecting in wide, panicked eyes. Headlines screamed: "Anonymous Killer Claims 30 Lives! Murderer Lurks, No One Safe!" The city, once a vibrant tapestry of everyday life and hidden magic, was now a haunted house, stalked by an unseen monster whose motives were as murky as the shadows it commanded.

Into this swirling mess stumbled Aelin, a quiet city girl who preferred dusty books to heroic quests and her own company to crowded parties. She was the type who could vanish into a crowd, a ghost in the city's winding streets. Then, her world exploded. She discovered, with the force of a magical earthquake, that she was the unexpected guardian of the Infinite Triangle, the multiverse's most powerful artifact. This monstrous responsibility, like a poorly wrapped, ticking time bomb, shoved her into a deadly game – a maze of ancient prophecies, hidden powers, and dangers you couldn't even imagine. Suddenly, Aelin, the unassuming city girl, stood on the edge of oblivion.

Vineet Kumar is a scholar warrior, whose adventures span military operations, battle grounds, and beyond. An alumnus of IIM Ahmedabad and Jawaharlal Nehru University, he blends military leadership with deep academic inquiry in defence, peace studies, and geopolitics. From instructing UN peacekeepers across 50+ nations to mastering scuba diving in all the prominent oceans, Vineet turns every experience into a meaningful story and every story into a meaningful experience.

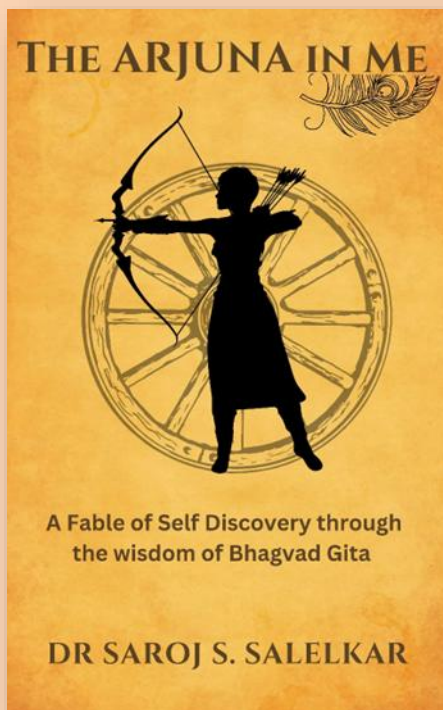

You know the pain: the crushing, cyclical heartbreak that repeats itself no matter how hard you try. Vineet Kumar lived it. A man of immense professional success, he was forced into a crucible of solitude and self-analysis when his personal life shattered for the final time. What he discovered will change how you view every relationship you've ever had. Through brutally honest storytelling, this memoir reveals that the root of all failure is not chemistry, but fear. Kumar exposes the "slight tilt" in our emotional machinery that guarantees we manifest the very abandonment we dread. This is the story of leaving the chaos of external pursuit behind to find inner peace. It is a powerful, spiritual, and intensely practical guide to performing the energetic divorce from the past and executing the radical shift from seeking love out of fear to seeking love out of love.

If you're tired of asking why you keep failing in Love, this is the book that shows you how to stop.

A CA-turned-HR Leader with over 18 years in Corporate Leadership across Operations, Training & HR before choosing a purpose-led path in Storytelling, Emotional Mastery & Embodied Consciousness.

What if the very thing you were taught to hide became the reason you were chosen?

Set

against the sharp edges of a high-powered corporate law firm, this novel dives into the internal world of Itika Benegal — a brilliant, guarded, asexual woman navigating ambition, identity, and the politics of power. Recruited by the country's top law firm under suspicious circumstances, Itika finds herself caught between two formidable giants, Ayesha Dhar and Sunny Nair, locked in a silent war. But as boardroom rivalries intensify, a devastating personal revelation shatters the foundation of everything she thought she knew about herself and her family.

This is not merely a corporate drama. It is an intimate exploration of invisibility, desire, identity, and the quiet burden of being “different” in a world obsessed with labels and longing. As ambition collides with desire, Itika must confront a forbidden path that could either redefine her strength—or leave a permanent scar.

A story about power, secrecy, and self-acceptance, this book unpacks what it truly means to own your flaw — before it owns you.

MRP : 350/-

The Friday Girl:

When a buried family secret fractures her carefully constructed world, Itika Benegal is forced into an impossible choice: cling to the identity she built in the present—or walk back into a past her mother fought hard to erase.

Set between the restless pulse of Mumbai and the mystic forests of Dandeli, this time-bending romantic suspense unravels the inner lives of two women on the edge of ruin—a daughter searching for belonging, and a mother haunted by choices she cannot undo. At its core, this is a story across two generations about identity in transition. About the kind of love that heals—and the kind that wounds. About spiritual awakening that doesn't arrive gently, but through collapse, longing, and the final unravelling of truth.

As ambition, ancestry, romance, and faith come colliding together, Itika must confront the question we all secretly fear:

Are you willing to let go of who you are to become the one you were meant to be?

Some journeys don't lead you forward or backward.

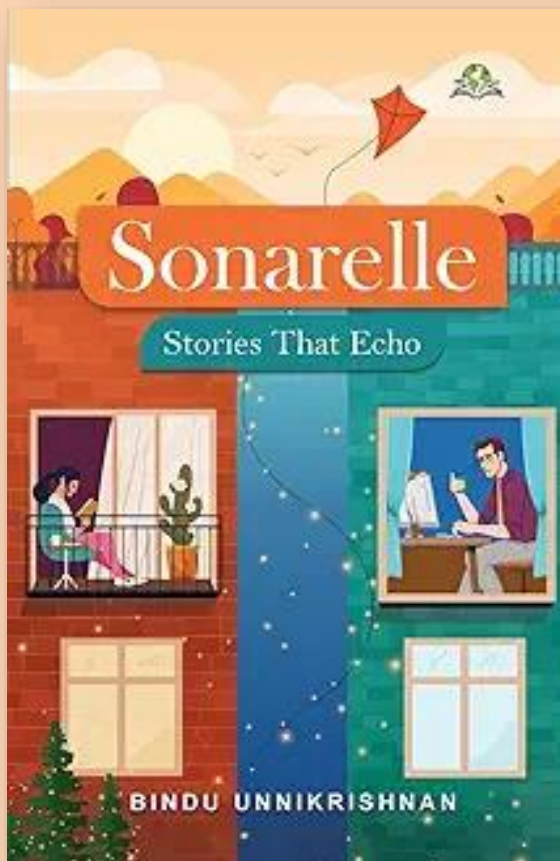

They take you inward.

Brace for impact.

A short poem is a drop of the divine, a brief, brilliant flash. An emotion surges, you create an image, and the jewel is born, plucked out of thought-flow, rubbed and polished to its innate glow. Haiku is like that. Intrinsically beautiful! Some see the beauty and others do not. Moreover, poetry is a personal experience. There's no saying what will touch the heart, the senses, the brain, and why. Haiku and Other Micropoetry would appeal to many people who have had idyllic childhoods in a world less crowded; who have enjoyed simple pleasures, or not; who have loved, lost, laughed, cried, danced, achieved, failed, and done everything that life bid them. They have searched for meaning and known the pain of that search. They have allowed themselves to grow with every experience. Haiku heals. A short verse brings moments of recognition. A lot more can happen within these pages. Haiku and Other Micropoetry will be read by some with love and some with déjà vu. Some will identify with it, some might just toss it aside, and others might carry it around as a favorite dip-into read.
